A screenshot of a web application dialog box titled "Update email". It contains a yellow information box with three bullet points: "Your selection will be sent to the email you choose.", "You can choose to send email to current email address in our system, or send email to optional email you fill in.", and "If you do not have any email registered in our system, you have to fill in the optional email." Below this, there are two radio button options: "Current user's email" (unselected) and "Optional email" (selected). The "Optional email" option has a text input field containing "peter.pan@nevernever.com". At the bottom, there are "Cancel" and "Send email" buttons. An arrow points from the "Send email" button to the explanatory text below.

We can communicate with you directly if you enter your email address here. We will only use this email address for information about the Option Choices Process.
